

STRATO: Europe's second-largest Web Host

STRATO simplifies active Internet participation - for newcomers, for professionals, and for businesses.

Content creation over the Internet is growing: personal users are publishing their own photos, videos, and texts in communities and on blogs, forums, and websites; and also professional users are profiting from new forms of collaboration. This is all further enhanced by the shift of data and applications online and accessible everywhere. Increasingly Internet users are also storing their personal files - such as photos, music, and text documents - on secure online platforms.

STRATO is a major driver of this growing active participation online, for both personal and corporate users. STRATO's innovative products allow customers to actively shape the online experience: products include personal Web addresses, user-friendly Web packages for blogs, photo and multimedia albums, a site-builder, homepage packages, and servers for advanced users. For corporate users STRATO offers professional servers, webshops, hosted Windows applications, and enterprise software. In addition personal and business customers can take advantage of online hard-drives, that are both secure and fully available wherever there is internet access.

All data is stored in our two high-performance, TÜV-certified (according to ISO 27001) data centres located in Germany. This strict TÜV certification is regarded as the "gold standard" by banks, insurance companies, and health insurance providers.

Environmentally speaking, STRATO has consistently followed a green IT strategy for many years. Beginning with extensive energy conservation measures, STRATO then switched to renewable energy for its data centres, whose operations have now been carbon-neutral since 2008.

In customer service STRATO is also leading the way. Not only is STRATO approved to the TÜV's MS-Service-Quality standard but also remains fully integrated within the company's Berlin headquarters. This immediate proximity, to product development and to management, ensures both top-class customer care and quick assimilation of customer feedback into new products.
